The International Association for the Study of Pain (IASP)
URL: http://weber.u.washington.edu/~crc/IASP.html
Institution: International Association for the Study of Pain
Authors/Webmasters: Content: C. Richard Chapman, Ph.D. (crc@u.washington.edu);
Server: Robert C. Jacobson, Ph.D. (rcj@u.washington.edu)

Quality of Links
All of the links are current and relevant to the topics of pain management and research. The site contains references to other pain societies and IASP chapters, unofficial pain resources, and the World Health Organization.

Search Capabilities
This site appears to have no search capabilities.

Summary
The IASP Web page is well-organized and informative. Pain management and research are important topics, and the page is broad enough in appeal to merit many return visits by medical professionals in a variety of fields. This page is an excellent model for other society home pages.

Keith J. Ruskin, M.D.
Assistant Professor of Anesthesiology
Yale University School of Medicine
New Haven, Connecticut

(Accepted for publication January 14, 1999)